

A far cry

People think I am mad to leave a high-paid job to discover who I am, to learn the way of the vibration. And even though it has been a hard journey full of people telling me that what I am doing doesn't fit into the world of the material and may be right. To see those faces after I have shared releasing such turmoil and energy that have stopped them seeing the big picture, makes life and struggles all worthwhile. The glow as they release years of negativity, makes the life I lead to find such a gift from the source out ways any turmoil I have gone through in my life. I am no martyr or even class myself as spiritual. Far from it, just an ordinary person searching for the path, the knowledge to understand "why" life is the way it is and how to find peace. The realisation that peace was already there and that the journey highlighted that in everything peace can be found has made me realise that nothing in life is wasted. Only my thoughts of the waste have created the life I have. At times magic moments just flow, and it is only when my insecurities surface to release, and I hold onto them; I spiral out of control back to a world I have created. The fear of not being accepted, not playing my part and knowing knowledge that if shared will just open the eyes of many to the amazing experiences of sharing. This is the key, "in the sharing we evolve." We become once more the person we were born, that we have always been, sharing the source with everyone. In the sharing, we learn, we are no longer separated by anything and so have no need to search or be anything. We don't need to fight, blame or fear anything as we are guided to stay peace. Our mind is at peace as we just enjoy the moment and feel the unconditional love in the source. We may take ourselves away from this at times, but it is easily found again in everything. We suddenly allow ourselves to be the path and then opportunities just flood in, so many choices that we have never seen for the focus on the searching. Animals and plants no longer play their part but emerge with us and just enjoy the peace with us. It is then we see the part they played in helping us to blossom. We see the beauty in all, and no longer we are searching for completeness. Odd moments we would get a glimpse but the brain over loads, us once more, because we are absorbing lessons that it needs to learn to clear out the negativity we hold onto. The brain knows if the body doesn't work, then it too will not survive. So intuition and gut feelings fall by the wayside as the initial pure message is changed into a lesson because we are separate, not one with the energy that bring the body in line and releases the negativity automatically. We look for the weakness in others to give ourselves an advantage in the world that we feel is surviving. We see weakness as a problem that needs eradicated, when we lose sight that as one we are more powerful, no longer fearful and see the big picture to what living is about. When we realise everyone is just reflecting and when we keep flowing peace or the source, others then let down their guard and share the inner self, the source that we have ignited by following the same. It is then peace is created for a moment, and suddenly the person starts to heal themselves and give us guidance without knowing. The words we need to get louder; everything seems brighter as we both flow in sharing. Barriers are taken down and the fear of not sharing is lost in the doing. Everything has its part to play and even if you have made mistakes, done wrong things, you can realise that this was your part and if you don't learn to share with another and create balance, you will always be learning the lesson of your part you play. You will become the victim as you learn what you created. But peace once more can be shared when you pay back the experience you chose to learn. For the past makes us into the person we are and forgiveness to ourselves, helps us to move forward to share and help others vibrating the same lessons. However, if you learn to meet with peace in your heart, then you allow the negativity to be let go from the body. You will be guided to peace to share with yourself and others.

